BETTERNET LAB MOVING AWAY FROM SLUTS & MACHO'S ONLINE

Debunking myths and online gender stereotypical behaviour

Concept

A one-day conference in which we want to give guidance on how to deal with gender stereotyped behaviour among young people online. It will target a wide range of professionals who come into contact with young people in one way or another (social workers, teachers, NGOs, etc.) and it will lead to concrete recommendations to (Belgian and European) politicians and policy makers.

Why?

Child Focus is the Belgian helpline for a safer internet. And we notice in our figures, but also those of others, that gender stereotyped behaviour still has an enormous impact on online communication between young people. Think of 'slut shaming' and macho behavior of boys ... Meanwhile, we see that boys are also sometimes victims of the stereotyped behavior, but they are less likely to seek help or talk about emotions ... While most professionals will recognize these issues, they often do not know how to react. This conference will respond to this need, offering concrete tools to work effectively on the topic.
